

Must-Have Board Documents

Even the most organized, responsible, and amiable board needs to document its activities, internal rules, and processes.

Some of the documentation is legally required while some is simply helpful to have. Some documents should be available to the public while others must be kept confidential. Some serve as guidelines for decision making while others are part of the record keeping. For a board that takes its fiduciary role seriously, written rules simply are part of necessary risk management.

Here are the various documents to which your board needs to pay attention.

- Should not contain overly detailed procedures or restrictions as changes must be approved by the membership or full board
- Should be reviewed for fine-tuning every few years

Policies

- Some apply to the organization, such as whistleblower and gift acceptance policies
- The chief executive is responsible for personnel policies and office procedures but the board should ensure that they exist and are adequate.

CATALYSTS^x

- Some supplement the bylaws and guide board practices and oversight procedures, such as investment, internal controls, and executive compensation policies
- Some direct staff operations, such as personnel policies.
- Operating guidelines for board and staff

Board Processes

- Explain how to implement a policy, e.g., a separate document that explains step-by-step how to remove a board member or resolve a conflict.
- Serve as standard operating procedures.

Job Descriptions and Charters

- Expectations for individual board members, officers, committees, task forces, and the chief executive
